By John Mullarkey

JOHN EDWARD MULLARKEY

1927 -

I am the son of Edward and Rose (Garvey) Mullarkey. I was born on March 27, 1927 in New Bedford, Mass. My older sister is Catherine (Mullarkey) Silva. Our younger brother, Edward, was born in 1939, but lost to us at the young age of 28. In my formative years I lived in the south end of New Bedford and began my schooling at St. Anne's Parochial School. St. Anne's provided instruction in both French and English. After five years of struggling with the French language (and there have even been some questions raised regarding my mastery of English), my mother, a very wise woman indeed, had me transferred to public school. After sixth grade, I went to Roosevelt Junior High School. I then I went to New Bedford Vocational School where I studied to be an electrician.

Of course, by 1943 we were embroiled in World War II. I was sixteen at the time and part of a very restless group of young people. This restlessness led me to convince my mother and dad that I could be of more help to the family if I went to work. I worked for one year and then enlisted in the Navy on the day that I turned seventeen. I left for Sampson Training Station, near Syracuse, New York: ironically, not far from where my dad had trained in World War I. After completing Boot Camp on June 6, 1944 (D-Day for the Normandy invasion), I was sent to electrical school in Detroit, Michigan. After electrical school, I was shipped out to the Pacific Theater where I served on the aircraft carrier, the USS Hornet. The training I received in the Navy served me well, as I later worked as a construction electrician for over 40 years. I also held various positions with the Electrician's Union.

I met Agnes, my wife-to-be, when we were both in junior high school. In 1945, after her high school graduation, her family moved to California. I was discharged from the service and returned home to New Bedford for a short time in 1946, but soon made my way back to California and to Agnes. We were married in 1947 and recently celebrated our 56th wedding anniversary. We are fortunate to have raised nine children: Jim, Theresa, Patricia, Thomas, Rosemary, Joanne, Robert, Catherine, and Elaine. Tragically, we lost our daughter, Theresa, to cancer in October 1989, when she was only 39 years old. In addition to the time spent raising our children, my wife and I were very active in the Lay Apostolate in the Catholic Church. We were also very involved for many years with the Christian Family Movement, the Cursillo Movement and working with various ecumenical groups.

We live in Albany, California, which is situated very near the University of California at Berkeley. We are just five minutes from Oakland and right across the bay from San Francisco. We enjoy a view of the famous Golden Gate Bridge everyday, providing there is no fog! The weather here is moderate year-round; a blessing as I worked primarily on the construction of high-rises! I retired on March 25, 1989 on my 62nd birthday.

In retirement, I have been pursuing and continue to gather information about the Mullarkey Family. I hope that my story will give you the incentive and inspiration to write your own story. Once completed, we will have the most comprehensive history of our family possible...a gift to ourselves and to succeeding generations.

IRISH PRAYER

I thought it might do us well to start with a prayer, verse and blessing.

*May the road
rise up to meet you,
May the wind be always
at your back,
May the sun shine warm
upon your face,
And the rains fall soft
upon your fields,
And until we meet again,
May God hold you
in the palm of His hand.*

An old Irish verse

This blessing was given as the benediction to the graduating class of 1995 at Claremont McKenna College by my granddaughter Andrea Mullarkey. The commencement speaker at this graduation was Henry Kissinger, former Secretary of State. It was his first time giving a commencement address to a college graduation.

FOREWORD

This book was started many years ago when my daughter, Pat, wrote to my cousin, Marie Mullarkey of Rhode Island, for a high school project on one's ancestors. We received the first bits of information from Marie. Later on, she visited us on a trip to California and at that time I recorded her story of the family history. That recording took me to what would be the beginning stages of my research and letter writing. In 1982 we had a small reunion in Fairhaven, Massachusetts where I met more members of the family and gathered additional information. On a trip back east in 1985, I was able to gather still more facts and information.

It is interesting that the book has "come together" in May as it was 110 years ago on May 1, 1884 that John and Mary Heaney Mullarkey arrived in America and settled in Manville, Rhode Island. Any of you who received my letters over the years can vouch for the fact that this endeavor I pursued has a very amateurish approach to it. First, I bought a typewriter and learned to use it as I went along. Although my spelling is pretty good, hitting the wrong keys didn't help matters any. As far as my punctuation goes, it isn't whether it is right or wrong, it's just that I used poetic license with it and punctuated it in the John Mullarkey mode.

I am sure that as you received the "green envelopes" from me some may have read them with some enjoyment. Others surely set them aside with the junk mail and still others must have said, "Oh no! There goes John again with requests for more information or pictures!"

All in all, I am quite pleased with the results of my search and proud and very happy to put my name on it as author. But as you all know, the "author" is the entire family: those who have gone before, the ones who are here now and those to come in the future. I am honored to have been the co-coordinator of the information, pictures, and letters – the catalyst for your thoughts. The putting together of such a book takes you to the peaks and valleys emotionally; it brings out the despair of illness and death, the tragedies of so many. But it also brings the happiness shared at a new birth, childhood days, and the many pleasant moments in life.

With this in mind I would like to dedicate the book to my daughter, Theresa Ann (who was taken by cancer in 1989 at the age of 39), and to all those who died so young.

The Making of "The Mullarkeys of Manville"

I originally put the pictures for this project on the wall of my office. I then videotaped and narrated it. I made five copies of the original book and sent it off to others for their contributions. I had no idea at the time I took this picture how far this endeavor would go. Looking at this page now it is clear how much progress is being made.

PREFACE

I will try to take you on a trip that will tell the story of John and Mary (Heaney) Mullarkey and their family, up to the present time. I have acquired the pictures from so many gracious family members to supplement the story through three generations (mine being the third). I have also tried to include information about the Mullarkey name, its origin, coat of arms, emigration and some humor (a Mullarkey trademark). I have some pictures of family gravestones and hope that this will not distress anyone. I plan for this story to be a source of information for all.

John Mullarkey and Mary Heaney were born in Sligo, Ireland. As I understand it, their families, like so many others, left Ireland due to the potato famine. They went to Preston, England. It is unclear whether they had already met in Ireland or not. They eventually married and settled in Preston and had seven children: John, Margaret, Mary, Francis, Joseph, Edward, and William. John Mullarkey, Sr. was a teacher of Gaelic, which he taught to the Irish in Preston. I understand that this was against the law at the time. He received little to no pay and was inclined to spend what he did make on books. It is said that he wore a high silk hat, which was purported to be a sign of prestige. The money spent on books was undoubtedly needed for family expenses, but not being there and this being hearsay, we best not judge him too harshly.

Mary evidently worked hard to sustain the family and, with help from her family already in America, was able to bring some of the family over in time. John and Mary left Preston and arrived in Manville, Rhode Island on May 1, 1884 with Margaret, Mary, Joseph, Edward, and William. Francis and Isabel followed in 1886 with their children (John born in 1883 and Mary in 1885) and all settled in Rhode Island. John, the eldest brother, remained in England and went into the Armed Forces there.

MULLARKEY

The Irish surname, Mullarkey, is itself an Anglicization of the Gaelic, "O Maoilearca", which literally signifies "a devotee of St. Earc". The forename, Earc, in turn may be derived from the Gaelic word, "earc", meaning "an ox" or sometimes "trout". Thus the original bearer would have been endowed with either the strength of an ox, or with the mythical trout's quality of wisdom.

The surname belongs to a Tirconnell family, which, in common with many others, migrated to Connacht from Donegal in the seventeenth century in the wake of the O'Donnell, and it is in that province that the name is chiefly found today; particularly in the counties of Sligo, Mayo, and Galway.

Records of the surname date back to at least the seventeenth century, when one of the leaders of the O'Neill-O'Cahan conspiracy against the Ulster Planters in 1615 was Edmond Mullarkey, the Provincial of the Irish Franciscans. The comparative rarity of the surname is illustrated by the fact that the census in 1890 showed there to be only twenty-one bearers of the name in the whole of Ireland, all of whom were located in Connacht.

THE MULLARKEY COAT OF ARMS IS HEREBY ILLUSTRATED. IN THE TRADITIONAL LANGUAGE OF HERALDRY, THE ARMS (SHIELD) WOULD BE DESCRIBED AS:

"VERT: A CROSS OR., ACCOMPANIED BETWEEN ITS BRANCHES BY A SHAMROCK ARG., ALL SURMOUNTED BY A LABEL OF THREE PENDANTS OR."

WHEN TRANSLATED THE BLAZON ALSO DESCRIBES THE ORIGINAL COLORS OF THE MULLARKEY ARMS AS:

"GREEN, A GOLD CROSS ACCOMPANIED BETWEEN ITS BRANCHES BY A SILVER SHAMROCK, ALL SURMOUNTED BY A GOLD LABEL OF THREE PENDANTS."

IT'S "A BUNCH OF MALARKEY" THE ORIGIN

S. F. SEMANTICIST PETER TAMONY, 82

The following information was given to Rose, one of my daughters, who at the time, was working at a senior home in San Francisco.

As an historian of words, Mr. Tamony had spent the last 55 years studying American slang, digging into the origins of colloquialisms. A consultant to the Oxford English Dictionary, the etymologist wrote the dictionary's explanation for the origins of such slang terms as "hot dog," "Shanghai," "mugging," "malarkey," and "sandlot baseball," all of which are drawn from San Francisco.

For example, "malarkey," Mr. Tamony discovered, was drawn from the name of a fast-talking and boastful Irishman named Jerry Mullarkey who shucked oysters on California Street in the 1870's. He found that the "martini" was named for the bartender who routinely made it for a passenger on the old Martinez Ferry.

A self-taught scholar, Mr. Tamony made his living as a real estate agent. He said he stumbled upon the studies that would dominate his life because of the street talk he learned as a youth in the Mission District in San Francisco.

"Well, it has to do with where I've lived all my life – right here in a three block area," he said in 1965. "I grew up with a bunch of roughnecks – a word, by the way that comes from the high knitted sweaters they sported – and the people downtown where I worked were always asking me to explain my talk."

A member of the American Word Society, Mr. Tamony stored the results of his research in dozens of soap containers that overflowed the thirteen-room house in the Mission District of San Francisco where he spent most of his life.

How the Mullarkey Family Archives Works

The lines of the Mullarkey Family Archives translate as follows:

WHO? DID WHAT? (+ADDITIONAL INFORMATION)
WHERE? (SAYS WHO?) WHEN?

WHO? is the Mullarkey individual (last, first)

DID WHAT? is what that individual did - the event - (died, married, resided, etc.)

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION tells you further about what he or she DID

WHERE refers to the location of the event

SAYS WHO gives the database source of information

WHEN gives the date of the event

JACK MULLARKEY MARRIED (JILL PARKER) AT DENVER CO (MARRIAGE DB)

The Mullarkey Family Archives are sorted like the phone book - alphabetically by first name. It's further sorted by date (oldest first). Therefore, if you get several JOHN MULLARKEYS they will be entered in date of event sequence.

A word about the archives.

THE BABY ARCHIVES

My wife and I created this one when we were looking for names for our second born. We wanted a good ethnic qualified name with a history either in my family or her family. Since we had all these family names already in the computer we just did a sort by first names - then listed them out by popularity. So when you see a BABY DB entry with a number - that will give you an idea how frequently the name has been used over the past century for the surname Mullarkey.

THE BORN ARCHIVES

Self-explanatory. The Social Security number is given in the ADDITIONAL INFORMATION slot when available.

THE BUSINESS ARCHIVES

We took all the businesses that begin with Mullarkey. Occasionally it doesn't make sense, but usually you get a good idea of your cousins in business.

THE CENSUS ARCHIVES

Mostly from United States and Canadian State, Federal, and Provincial records. The page numbers are given when available in the ADDITIONAL INFORMATION slot.

THE MULLARKEY INTERNATIONAL REGISTRY

The Mullarkey International Registry has been developed to determine where Mullarkey families have migrated and where they live throughout the world today. Using a highly sophisticated network of computer sources in Europe, North America, and Australasia, over 150 million name and address records have been searched to locate Mullarkey family members. The sources of these records include electoral rolls, telephone books, city directories, and miscellaneous public surname lists. The result of this research as related to Mullarkey single and family households is summarized in the following chart.

Ireland.

The gateway to your family history is your surname

In Search of Your Irish Heritage

by Gene & Adele Malott

The world outside of Ireland holds a lot of Irish. Indeed, the tiny island with just 3.5 million population can claim more than 44 million Americans as kin, plus 5 million Canadians, 5 million Australians, uncounted millions of British, and heaven knows how many in the rest of the world.

Is it any wonder, then, that so many travelers to Ireland are in search of their ancestry? Especially since the Irish make tracing ancestors easy: For one thing, the average Irish family's records go back only to the manageable year of 1820, and not to the 16th century like, say, the Germans.

As in any search for roots, the gateway to your family history is your surname, but with the uncountable "MacWhatses" and "O'Somethings" in this world, you'll need more information — and a great tolerance for spelling variations. Before your trip, gather what information you can from your family's elders: what Irish town or county your ancestors hailed from; religious affiliations and occupations; dates of births, marriages, christenings, deaths; names of parents, siblings, and children; approximate dates of departure from Ireland and arrival in North America. Don't ignore your grandmother's narrative references to things like "the year of the terrible fever" or "the time of the big wind"; these descriptive phrases carry meaning for the experts, who can tell you that the former was 1832, and the latter took place in 1839.

Some crucial information is available on the American side of the Atlantic. Two regional offices of the U.S. National Archives handle information on many Irish immigrants: the New England office at 380 Trapelo Road, Waldham, MA 02154 (617-647-8100), and the New York office at 201 Varick Street, New York, NY 10014 (212-337-1300).

All In The Family

Everybody comes from 2 parents, 4 grandparents, 8 great-grandparents, 16 great-great-grandparents, etc. Every generation back we go, we have twice as many lineal ancestors.

This is very much like the Persian Chessboard problem. If there are, say, 25 years to a generation, then 64 generations is  $64 \times 25 = 1600$  years ago, or just before the fall of the Roman Empire. So, every one of us alive today had in the year 400 some 18.5 quintillion ancestors – or so it seems – to say nothing about collateral relatives.

But this is far more than the population of the Earth, then or now. It is far more than the number of human beings who ever lived. Something is wrong with our calculation. What? We have assumed all those lineal ancestors to be different people. But this is not the case. The same distant ancestor is related to us by many different routes. We are repeatedly connected with our relatives. Every marriage brings cousins together.

If we go back far enough, any two people anywhere on Earth have a common ancestor. Whenever a new American President is elected, someone – generally in England – discovers that the new President is a distant relative of the Queen of England. This announcement is intended, perhaps, to soothe any residual American longing for a king of our own. Of course, when two people derive from the same small corner of the world, and their genealogies are well-recorded, the last common ancestor can be discovered. But whether it can be discovered or not, a relationship is clear: We are all cousins – all members of a vast world-girdling family. It's time, I think, for a reunion.

IRISH HUMOR

A bus driver reciting a poem he had learned about taking a little too much of the poteen:

It was a cold day in September
A day I well remember
As I struggled down the street with drunken pride
My feet began to flutter
So I lay down in a gutter
And a pig came and lay down by my side
As I lay there in the gutter
Saying words I shouldn't utter
A lady passing by was heard to say
"You can tell a man who boozes
By the company he chooses,"
And the pig got up and slowly walked away!

AN OLD IRISH CURSE

May those that love us love us;
And those that don't love us,
May God turn their hearts;
If he can't turn their hearts,
May he turn their ankles,
So we'll know them by their limping.

Getting all that cousin business straight

If your mother has a sister and the sister has a child, that child and you are enatic cousins. If your father has a brother and the brother has a child, that child and you are agnatic cousins. Enatic means related on the mother's side. Agnatic means related through males.

Your father's brother's son is your first cousin. Your father's brother's son's son is your first cousin once removed. That boy and your son are second cousins. The "removed" refers to the generation gap.

Persons of the same generation are just cousins, first or second or third or whatever, depending on how distant they are from a common ancestor. Cousins of different generations are "removed" by the number of generations that separate them. Your grandfather's first cousin is your first cousin twice removed; your father's first cousin is your first cousin once removed.

Your mother and father get married and produce a child, you. They get divorced. You go live with your mother, who married another man. He's your step-father. He and she have another child. He's your half-brother. Your step-father's son by his first marriage moves in with you. He's your step-brother. Households get crowded; life gets complicated.

Many, many years ago when I was twenty-three
I was married to a widow who was pretty as could be
This widow had a grownup daughter who had hair of red
My father fell in love with her, and soon they too were wed

This made my Dad my son-in-law and really changed my life
For now my daughter was my mother, 'cause she was my father's wife
And to complicate the matter, even though it brought me joy,
I soon became the father of a bouncing baby boy

My little baby then became a brother-in-law to Dad
And so became my uncle, though it made me very sad
For if he were my uncle, then that also made him brother
Of the widow's grownup daughter, who was of course my stepmother

Father's wife then had a son who kept them on the run
And he became my grandchild, for he was my daughter's son
My wife is now my mother's mother, and it makes me blue
Because although she is my wife, she's my grandmother too

Now if my wife is my grandmother, then I'm her grandchild
And every time I think of it, it nearly drives me wild
'Cause now I have become the strangest case you ever saw
As husband of my grandmother, I am my own grandpa

I'm my own grandpa,
I'm my own grandpa,
It sounds funny, I know
But it really is so
I'm my own grandpa

NOT "OUR FAMILY" AS FAR AS WE KNOW, BUT MULLARKEYS OF CONNAUGHT NO LESS

The following is an article that appeared in the newspaper Western People around 1995 which was published in the Northwest of Ireland. HISTORY OF MAYO. HOW OLD FAMILIES FARED. Some noted Achonry Priests. By Father Denis O'hara. By J.F. Quinn.

THE CLANS OF ACHONRY (X11): Anxious to obtain further information about the Mullarkeys of Drumartin, referred to in the manuscript left by the late John Ormsby Cooke of Kiltrra and quoted in the two previous articles I went to Drumartin and interviewed the heads of two of the four families remaining. Austin who lives closest to Tourlestrane Church, and his brother-in-law, Patrick, who lives near Mullaney's Cross, told me practically the same thing, but both were faulty as to dates in fact had none; but from O'hart's pedigree of Cooke and the manuscript we referred to we can find approximately when the family settled at Drumartin and got possession of the 14 divisions of it, each containing 25 Irish acres of land, and good for the most part, the family ramifications being supplied by Patrick, whom I was told was the best historian of the family.

AFTER AUGHHRIM: Apparently it was after Aughrim (1001) the first of the Cookes settled in Mayo, marrying the daughter of Dr. Lynch, Westport, whose wife was a Mullarkey of Drumartin. Her two brothers described as bachelors and gentlemen, are referred to, and left their property to people of the same name, indicating that they themselves had no children. This agrees with the family tradition that they were unmarried. In the document the "yellow doctor" is referred to, and it is interesting to recall that like the O'hara boy (yellow O'hara) and the O'hara Grey O'hara the Mullarkeys in former times were known as the Black Mullarkeys and the yellow Mullarkeys.

OF SPANISH EXTRACTION: The Mullarkeys are reputed to have been Spaniards who had trading association with the west as shippers of Irish yarn. They rented the quarterland of Drumart from a man named Digby whose wife was Eliza Cooper of Markree. He was then living at Ballinafad near Ballymote, the head of this family now being the 11th Baron Digby. The head rent was L30 a division. Apparently the Mullarkeys made the transaction pay, for when Digby got pressed for cash they were in a position to relieve him and for a payment of L1,400 in gold (equal to four or five times the amount in present currency) they got a lease for 999 years at a greatly reduced rent. This lease had an interesting repercussion in recent years and one that worked to the considerable financial advantage of the Mullarkeys and the other tenants on the estate.

THE ORIGINAL LESSEES: Paddy and Austin were the original speculators, and accompanied by at least one sister and a number of relatives "set sail from the sunny land of Spain," and arrived in Connaught. Paddy, who was the head man lived on the division now held by Patrick (brother of Austin referred to). The family tradition is that during his lifetime he desired to have only namesakes living on the estate. Neither he nor Austin married, and I believe these are the two brothers referred to in the manuscript. In his lifetime Paddy cashed on his lease by setting holdings on fine and rent, and after highwaymen made a successful raid on him he is alleged to have buried a quantity of gold, which is still being sought for.

BIG JIM'S CROWD: Dr. Joseph Mullarkey, who was the first regular medical officer of the district, built Drumartin House, which was occupied by Mr. McGloin up to recently. The doctor never married, and he appears to have been head man, for in the famine years he bought up for £20 each a number of the sub-leaseholders who had decided to fly to England or America and later developments show that in subsequent years he again let to sub-tenants.

The doctor's sister married Michael Mullarkey, who occupied Drumartin after the doctor's death, and this Michael was father of Big Jim who lost the place through the operations of the Encumbered Estates Court, the purchasers being the McGloins of Aclare. In justice to Big Jim it should be stated that he never drank and that the estate was insolvent when he succeeded.

Father Dan Mullarkey, who built Tourlestrane church, dated 1844, and Michael Mullarkey (Big Jim's father) were brothers, and their mother was a Miss McManus, sister of Captain McManus, who had an estate at Tourlestrane, and for some time lived at Curroy.

IN MODERN TIMES: Coming down to modern times, Dan Mullarkey ("Dan Ceach"), who lived at Mullaney's Cross where he is succeeded by his son, Dan, another son (Patrick), living adjacent, was married to Margaret Mullarkey, daughter of Austin and niece of Michael and Father Dan.

"Dan Ceach's" brothers were John merchant, Tubbercurry who was married to Miss Cavanagh, Ballysodare: William, a farmer who lived near Tubbercurry and died unmarried and Patrick Mullarkey farmer, whose wife was a sister of the late Mr. James Daly, Castlebar, and Mr. Charles Daly Coachfield. All these have passed away except the last named.

Living just at Mullaney's Cross was another Dan, called "Dan the Scholar," who in his early days was intended for the church and became a schoolteacher. He always wore a tall hat in public. On his death his family sold the place and went to live in England. It was purchased by Mr. O'Connor, who sold to Mr. King, the present occupant.

Austin, previously referred to as the son of Patrick, succeeded his father and grandfather, his brother (Patrick) occupying the place where lived old Paddy, who originally leased from Digby. Though all these originally came from the same stem, the kindred was out and the two sisters of the latter married the two sons of "Dan Ceach."

THE LATEST DEVELOPMENT: Under the Digby lease the representative of the original Paddy Mullarkey was obliged to pay the annual rent in bulk, which involved the obligation of collecting from the sub-tenants, but this was easily done as the rents were nominal considering the quality of the land. The tenants could never find out any particulars about Digby, who operated through an agent. But one year's rent was alleged to have gone astray, or at least the tenants got no receipts, and they struck against paying. The result was that they paid nothing for a period of over ten years. The law proceedings brought out many interesting things. It will be remembered that at the final hearing in Dublin it was contended for the landlord that the Land Act of 1931 had not been properly implemented, the Clerk of the Dail not having certified it at the requisite time, and that the Land Commission had no right to take rent from the sub-tenants.

Excerpts about various Mullarkys from the book
WHERE THE SUN SETS by Father Sean Noone

BELMULLET PARISH: "A Mullarky girl from Muingingane, an excellent dancer, carried away many of the prizes."

Erris League football: "Playing for Shraigh in 1966 were: Mickie Mullarkey, Hugh Conway, Tony Henry, Andy Barrett, Austin Barrett..."

KILCOMMON PARISH: The town of Muingingane: "The peace of this quiet and secluded townland was shaken in December 1927, when two youths were lost during a heavy snow while feeding cattle on the mountainside. Michael and James Mullarky, two brothers, had taken hay to cattle three quarters of a mile from home. Blinded by the drifting snow and struggling to return home, James expired through sheer exhaustion and cold. Michael realizing that his own life was in peril, was forced to abandon his dead brother. It was some hours later that Tom Ruddy, a villager, saw a person in the distance seemingly wandering in a daze. A rescue party set out at once to rescue Michael and bring his dead brother home. Michael Mullarky later emigrated to America where he married a girl from Srahataggle. He died there just a few years ago."

KILTANE PARISH: "Up to the middle of the last century, abduction was a frequent occurrence in Erris. The authorities, determined to stamp it out gradually increased the penalties for the offence. The following is a report to Dublin Castle on January 24th 1839, of an abduction in Glencullen: "About the hour of 1:00 a.m. On Monday 21st a party of men about twelve in number, three of whom were identified as, John and Patrick Mularky of Shragaddy and Richard Cosgrove of said place broke into the dwelling house of Denis Mularky... and forcibly carried away Margaret Mularky daughter of said Denis who was at the time in bed. Her brother, James Mularky reported the circumstance to the Bangor police who immediately went in search of the persons accused and succeeded in apprehending the two principals John and Patrick Mularky and rescued the said Margaret Mularky from them. The parties were conveyed to the police barracks at Bangor where W. Cruise, Magistrate, received the informations of Margaret and James Mularky against the three persons already mentioned and committed the two Mularkys the following day to the county jail; a warrant has been issued for the apprehension of Richard Cosgrove."

Surname: O'Connor, Kelly, Barrett

Per Edward Laxton's wonderful book, The Famine Ships, 1996, the west of Ireland has beautiful stretches of coastline where the sea mists and loughs, rivers and streams and reliable rainfall endow the surrounding countryside with a beautiful green cloak. Sligo's majestic sweep of its broad bay is dominated by Benbulbin, by the dramatic rise of this angular, flat-topped mountain. This is Yeats country, where William Butler Yeats, born in 1865, found inspiration for so much of his poetry and where he chose to be buried in the churchyard at Drumcliffe.

The port of Sligo was the embarkation point for many of the "coffin" ships and for the poorest passengers, usually the victims of landlord emigration. The port had a long tradition of sending her ships to all corners of the world, and Peter O'Connor, a leading Sligo merchant, ordered a 276-ton barque, "Industry," to be built in 1839 to carry a regular cargo of Canadian timber through the shallow channel in the bay and up the river to his saw mills. In 1845, the owner proudly proclaimed that she had journeyed from Sligo to Quebec, under Captain Thomas Barrett, her regular master, in 29 days. It is not known whether she was carrying passengers on that trip, but 18 months later she carried 184 Famine emigrants from Sligo to New York, leaving December 26, 1846, under the command of Captain Michael Kelly. Although the late crossing was unusual at the time, dangerous winter voyages would become commonplace during the Famine years. During the crossing, "Industry" ran into a succession of storms which allowed little progress. Over three long winter months the ship floundered at sea; food and water ran low even with strict rationing and two seamen and 15 passengers died from malnutrition. "Industry" arrived in America on April 11, 1847, after 106 days at sea.

Surname: O'Connor

"Industry" to Quebec and "Linden" to New York - 1850
Notice to Passengers appeared in Irish newspaper, August, 1850:

"INDUSTRY" FOR QUEBEC -

Those who have engaged passage per the barque "Industry" for Quebec are required to come on Tuesday, the 20th inst. to pay the balance of their passage and put their luggage &c, &v, on board. There are a few berths not yet engaged. Persons who intend to go to the Canadas this season, should not lose this favourable opportunity, and being the only direct one they will have this season.

THE BARQUE "LINDEN: FOR NEW YORK -

Will be taking her passengers &c, &c, on board on Saturday, the 24th instant. This favourite ship is well known in the passenger trade between this port and New York.

Those persons who wish for a direct passage, free from the inconvenience and expense of going to more distant ports, will do well to make timely application for passage by those fine vessels - the rates of passages are moderate.

The weather on the morning of Thursday July 3, 2003, in New York Harbor, was what the Irish called a "soft rain" when the replica barque JEANIE JOHNSTON passed the Statue of Liberty. She was on twenty city port tour of the East Coast of the United States and Canada, starting in Florida, stopping for a twelve day visit to lower Manhattan, North Cove, Battery Park City. The ship represented the 19th century fleet that brought the victims of the Great Irish Famine in the 1840s to America and Canada.

It was one of the darkest parts of Irish 19th century history when a blight killed the potato crop, the principal part of the Irish diet. The population was faced with two choices, starve or emigrate to America or Canada.. Many of the landowner gentry had little food to export or feed the tenant farmers and paid their fare for the Atlantic crossing.

JEANIE JOHNSTON was built in a specially constructed shipyard in County Kerry, Tralee, Ireland and cost some $17 million. The designer was Fred M. Walker, Chief Naval Picture of the replica 19th century tall ship Jeanie Johnston, at Dublin Port January 2004. The ship which was created as a sail training vessel also has an on board museum which recounts the tragic history of the Irish 19th century famine years. The original Jeanie Johnston made its maiden voyage on 24 April 1848 to Quebec in Canada with 193 famine emigrants. During the famine years 1848-1855 it saved over 2,500 Irish people from starvation at home, bringing them safely across the Atlantic. The Jeanie Johnston was the only famine ship never to have lost the lives of any passengers while at sea.

The all wood hull, 148-foot long, three mast barque, carries a crew of 17, has a diesel engine and is built to conform to present day international safety standards. The master of the ship is Captain Tom McCarthy, who was in command of the Irish sail trainer ASGARD for nine years. Below decks on the ship is a museum setting, built to show how passengers were carried 150 years ago..

Although the JEANIE JOHNSTON was a millennium project it fell behind schedule and set sail for West Palm Beach, Florida in February of 2003. She has been touring ports on the Atlantic seaboard, including Quebec City where the original ship was built, and will finish up at St. John's Newfoundland in October 20, 2003, before returning to Ireland.

letter written, in 1851

The following is a transcript of a letter written, in 1851, by Richard Golden (Goulden) to his siblings who had immigrated to Essex County, Ontario, Canada, to purchase property for themselves and the rest of his family, including parents before they immigrated in 1952. I am copying this from a transcription which was printed in the Ottawa Branch of Ontario Genealogical Society in 1982. Since there are so many different names or family and friends, mentioned in the letter, I thought that with any luck someone out there might find a name of interest. I believe the original letter, was in the possession of Grant Golden, of Essex County, Ontario. Unfortunately, Grant passes away recently. Richard refers to both Canada and the USA as "America"

Anything in the [ ] brackets are my notes. Hope it isn't too long to go through.

Rathscanlon, May 19th 1851

My Dear brother and sisters.....

That cheering and encouraging letter which we were looking for arrived on the 6th of May. I need not be describing the comfort it brought, particularly to my poor mother. [ANN BLACK GOLDEN]

She is in a middling state of health at present, thanks to Almighty God for that and all other Mercies to us unworthy creatures. & O, what a privilege to hear from our most beloved friends who are always on our minds, almost taking the place of Him who requires our first and best thoughts. But God Almighty grant of His goodness for Christ's sake, for any anxiety or suffering we not fall from Him with whom we have to do.

We were also happy to hear how well my Aunt Sarah [SARAH BLACK GOLDEN] and cousins [William, John, Anthony and Sarah [PETTYPIECE] are. May God bless them for their kindness to you. You would be comfortless dear Jasper, only for them. We hope the Lord will prolong our lives another twelve months to see ye, also to thank our beloved Aunt and cousins for all their acts of kindness. You have still to admire the goodness of God in supporting us on the little means we have, as you and I often did.

Our stock is as good as when ye went. We sold the mare and foal at November and bought £5.7.6 worth of hon. I have the most of that money earned in plowing. Mr. H., [probably referring to his Landlord, O'HARA], the same kind man still. He got the Dean's plowing for me which came to 1.10.0. We joined Mrs. BEATTY of Rue. We bought an iron plow for £2.1.6, a very nice but a light one. Let us know if you will encourage us to bring it with us, if so, we would keep it. We have only our potatoes set. We have some over. We have had a very late spring but this month is coming on very favorably. We have about an acre and a half planted and intend to plant 3 more of turnips. We have half an acre of wheat sown. It did not make much progress yet. Have two acres of oats. It appears well. We had not enough grass of our own. We bought Roger GOLDEN's grass for £4.0.0. You know there is a good piece of meadow on it which will draw half of that money.

Now I must let you know about the friends. Mr. HAMILTON and lady and baby are all well and very happy to hear from ye. My Uncle Dick and his family are well. John is still unmarried. Mrs. EERAUS house-keeps for him. Aunt Mary HENDERSON is well. She is in Sligo yet and all the family. Eccles was home on a visit from the Army. They are gate-keeps of the old Abbey.

Mrs. POWELL and family are much the same way in health, but not the same respect. Elicia got married to Robt. IRWIN about a half year ago and lives in the big house with Robert. Mr. FRAZER and family are well. Mrs. GOLDEN is well. Mrs. FRIZZEL is well but Miss FRIZZEL gave up teaching on account of bad health. She is not very bad now. Miss BLACK teaches in her place. I wrote you about the death of Mr. POTTER. You never spoke about him so I doubt if you got that paper. I also sent two papers written with ink. I think ye ought to have them before ye wrote. Benson is in Tubbercurry dealing as before. The reason of his return, I think no person knows. Ellen stopped in New York and the rest of them came back. All in this town. John MULLARKEY came home too and is in this town. He left the two eldest sons in America. Tommy CONNOLY is home.

Margaret GOLDEN is married to James CARROLL. Both go to church. They are living in Mathew GORE's house. Our cousins the BRETT's are well in America. George, their brother went at Christmas. He brought a wife with him by the name of Emily GUFF. I think ye know her (big George's sister). George got hurt on the vessel and he is in hospital in America. The girls sent their mother home £5.00 They are well at home. The MORRISON's are all gone to America. LOUGHEEDs except Jane that married Hugh LOUGHEED. Dick McGee's family are all gone to America. Mrs. FERGUSON's widower Clifford is married to Miss O'CONNOR, James GOLDEN's sister-in-law. Miss FERGUSIN, Robert BLACK's sweetheart is also married to a young man near Ballymoli. Bessie WEST has gone to America. She went with the MORRISON's. Miss WALLIS is gone also. Pat GOLDEN is about going to America. There came no letter to Cloonacurrow from America, but what Willis sent. We hear Rich. PHIBBS got one lately. The old Uncle is well, at least he was well a month ago. I was down then. John BLACK, wife and child are well. Katherine FERGUSON's husband and daughter are well and doing well. Henry CONNOR is well and all the family.

Mrs. ROGERS was teaching school in Chafpool and the priest opposed it and Mrs. ARMSTRONG gave it up. Her son is well. John MORRISON, Bob's son died last Christmas. I was sorry for him. Old Jack POWELL is dead. He left his carriage and all to Pat COAN. Old Jack YOUNG in Ballisadare is married. Wm. GOLDEN, Mrs. GOLDEN's brother in Ballisadare came in to Tubbercurry and stopped half a year and then to Sligo to the poorhouse and two of his children are dead since he went. Jane WALKER of Carrane is gone to America. Wm. WEST (George's son) sent home £6.0.0 to his father. His sister Jane went to America. Wm. WEST (Tom's son) is still in the Police. I sent you a paper that he sent me.

The toothache pays me a visit betimes. My mother [Ann BLACK GOLDEN] hopes to see ye in America, God willing. My father [Richard Jasper GOLDEN] does be often thinking and planning how we will leave a row of trees behind the house. Then he says from all the ground William has [William PETTYPIECE, who had immigrated the year before], if we have to go back farther in the bush, God help us. I hope Jasper [GOLDEN, his brother] will choose a good farm. It is very particular you ought to be in choosing a spot where we expect to live on earth. Anthony and John [PETTYPIECE] will assist you in making a choice. We are very happy Sarah [GOLDEN, his sister] is in a religious family, and that she is content, and I hope she will see my father's house surrounded by a good number of hens.

Let us know as soon as possible how Maria [GOLDEN his sister] is situated and if content. It is lawful now to write in a paper if a person pay one penny for stamping it anywhere through the British Settlements. We expect that you will not forget to send us papers at least every fortnight or sooner. I wonder at Cousin Sarah's [PETTYPIECE] patience in waiting to get married till we go over. [She shouldn't of waited, as she never did marry!] I wonder how I forgot to mention and speak of John and family [PETTYPIECE] in our last letter but as I did I hope he will excuse me for I often prove awkward in many things. I hope my son Anthony [PETTYPIECE -- referring to Godson, son of William PETTYPIECE, who was only a few days old when he sailed for Canada] is doing well and that William [PETTYPIECE] would bring him up in the fear of the Lord. I promised since for a son of Louis's a namesake of my own. I do not intend to promise for any other child in this country.

Our Sunday school is doing well. Henry CONNER still attends it. We do have good congregations [this would most likely be St. George's Church of Ireland, in Tubbercurry]. We had on the 5th of May 105 people at Church. Dean HARE went to Waterford. He is replaced by a Lord MONTMORREY. I fear an exchange for the worse. Mr. O'BRIEN will get an atlas for you. Do not forget to remember us to William [PETTYPIECE] and his kind wife, John [PETTYPIECE] and family and also Thomas PETTYPIECE [? cousin of other Pettypiece's mentioned]. If the bush is a lonely place he must be very lonely. It is my mother's wish she was there, then her wish would be fulfilled, but she says she will venture, at any rate, this year will be the longest passed for many years. Winny would wish when you would be writing to Aunt Fanny to inquire about his brother James' family. Do not forget to let us know in your next what requisites will be necessary to bring with us and if farming implements are cheap and easy to get.

Mother is still in doubt about my Aunt Fanny and would like if you would be good enough to remove her doubts. Sarah GOLDEN] wished know if my mother fretted much. Not much now, it was mingled with joy ever since she heard of ye being at my Aunt's [Sarah BLACK PETTYPIECE]. She was wonderfully eased. Jasper's [GOLDEN] medicine proved good. She uses it still. I cannot say whether any of the PHIBBS will go out or not. I saw none of them this long time.

My mother thinks John lost all his good nature since he went to America. She says he was not so before he went. She hopes she will have nothing to answer of the promise she made for him. So I must conclude. We sent our love to you dear Jasper, Maria & Sarah and Aunt and Cousins. May the Lord bless ye.

[signed] Richard GOLDEN.

PS: John is well. He sends his love to you and M & S.

Wm. REID is gone to America this season.

During the 17th and 18th centuries over 60,000 men, women and children were involuntarily transported from the British Isles to the American colonies. The vast majority of these people were felons and paupers but there were a number of political and religious dissidents such as the Cromwellian transportees of the 1650s. The English courts were far more likely to order the transportation of prisoners than were the Scottish or Irish Courts, banishing about 50,000 prisoners to the colonies to work as indentured servants. The Scottish authorities ordered fewer than 3,000 prisoners to be transported and the Irish courts approximately 4,000.

In 1719, an act was introduced into the Irish House of Commons for "the better and more effectual apprehending and transporting of felons and others," and given Royal assent on March 8, 1725.

The kidnapping and shipment of children to America and their sale as indentured servants began to cause concern, however, and in January, 1743, the Irish Government established a committee to examine the whole system of transportation in detail.

Information presented to the committee contains valuable data pertaining to 2,000 Irish men and women transported to the American colonies during the mid-eighteenth century. As a result of this committee's investigations, further legislation was introduced in the Irish House of Commons in January, 1752, tightening up the rules governing the transportation of prisoners.

South Sligo Famine

Memorial Walk

A beautiful and moving tribute to the 150th anniversary of the Great Famine recently took place on the road between Ballina Quay and Tubbercurry. As part of the Tubbercurry 600 celebrations, the footsteps of the famous racehorse, Ballyara Pride, were retraced. The Mullarkey family of Tubbercurry was an important merchant family since the early 1800's up until the 1960's when their business finally closed. In the early 1840's they had a famous racehorse 'Pride of Ballyara' which in their own words 'netted a fortune for the Mullarkey family' while racing in England. In the mid 1840's he was retired back to Ballyara, just outside Tubbercurry where the family lived at that time. However, in 1847 at the height of the Famine, the horse was again called to duty. The Mullarkey family paid for four boatloads of food supplies to be brought to Ballina Port for distribution to the poor of South Sligo. The racehorse was now turned to carthorse as there were no other horses available and he drew supplies daily over several months. After the death of the horse it is reputed he was buried in the family plot where a headstone exists to this day with the following inscription.

The Pride of Ballyara
Tread softly o'er this spot
If blood can give nobility
A noble steed was he
His sire was blood
And blood his dam
And all his pedigree.
This slab is in remembrance
Of a famous thoroughbred
That netted a fortune
For the Mullarkey family.

In Black '47 the Famine years Dr. J.P. Mullarkey purchased 2 cargoes of oatmeal and two cargoes of potatoes and carted to Drumartin, Aclare, Tubbercurry as a gift. We shall ne'er see His like again.

Ballyara Graveyard has been closed for several decades and had fallen into a neglected state. However, Tubbercurry Chamber of Commerce, with the help of their local FAS scheme have done great work to help honour the memory of those who died during the Famine Years. Many of the graves in this beautiful graveyard remain unmarked. Indeed it is told locally that there are also quite a few French soldiers buried there since 1798. The Mullarkey plot also suffered with the passing of time, but it and the horse's slab have now been restored. As part of the Tubber 600 celebrations, nearly 200 men and women gathered at Ballina Port to start their 22-mile walk to Tubbercurry. After a short prayer service by Bishop Finnegan of Killala, the walkers started off in pouring rain.

ACHONRY TITHE APLOTMENT. Jan 14, 1827

FHL film 256,560

Transcribers: Joan Keating, Bill McGee [wfmcege@sympatico.ca], Aug. 2002

This is a transcription of the Tithe Applotment. It does not contain the valuation, or the land area. It is an indication of those renting land. The same person may rent several plots of land, and thus appear more than once. A question mark indicates either missing, or not readable [by us]. The numbers of plots are on the film, and have been retained, but do not appear to be part of the original; the townland numbers are in the original.

SPELLING First names have been spelled out. In particular, we have used Bartholomew for Barthly. Thus, first names are NOT as they appear in the Applotment. The spellings of surnames are not consistent with those of the Valuation 30 years later, and highly dubious, but have been retained.

TOWNLANDS The townlands [and townland spellings] of the Applotment are given here in italics; those of the Ordnance Survey [and current maps] are not italicized. If the two spellings agree, only one is given.

There are several townlands in the Ordnance Survey that do not appear in the Tithe Applotment, probably because they have a different name. These are Achonry, Ballyara [Knox], Ballyglass, Carnyara, Carrownacreevy, Carrowntawa, Cloonaraher, . Curraghbonaun, Kilcummin, Knocknashee Common, Lavagh, Toberscardan, Tullyhugh. There are several townlands in the Tithe Applotment not in the Ordnance Survey; these are in the first column in italics only..

Our apologies in advance for transcription errors from the film; please let us know, so that they may be corrected. The original is hand-written in early 19th century script.

- Townlands 1 to 42 are noted as in Mulinabreena Parish, probably the Roman Catholic parish of Achonry.
- Townlands 43 to 68 are noted as in Cloonmacool Parish, probably the Roman Catholic parish of Cloonacool.
- Townlands 69 to 93 are noted as in Curry Parish, probably the Roman Catholic parish of Curry.

The observant reader will notice that the word Achonry may be, among other things, a townland, a civil parish, a Roman Catholic parish, or a diocese, and all are different entities.

St. Walburge Church

The History of St. Walburge church goes back to when our family was there. My grandparents were born and baptized there and Isabella was married there. She had two children, John and Mary, baptized there. The rest came to Manville May 1st 1884. I thought it was appropriate to put this flyer from a fundraising endeavor in the book. I was there in 1997 but missed the fundraiser in 1994. If anyone ever goes to Preston please let me know as I have many questions pertaining to St. Walburge and the city hall there.

Comradeship

"They [the dockers] worked very hard and the harmony they had with each other was fantastic. The comradeship was second to none. You'll never find it anywhere else. And these people since they left the dock will agree with me. You'll never find that comradeship anywhere again."

"They all had nicknames but if a chap had a nickname it was never used outside the dock gates. It was a gentlemen's agreement. You got your nickname from an incident that had happened to you or something you'd done on the docks. For example, one bloke who used to work on the dustbins prior to working on the dock got the name 'lobby doors', because he used to carry the bins and knock on the lobby doors. But he was never called that outside the dock. My nickname was 'Perry Como' because I used to sing down below and stop the job. And everybody would be waiting while I'd finished and they would say 'Can we start now?' "

"We called him Pug Baxter. He was a little dumpy chap, always fighting about town. Loved a fight as much as he loved a meal. He was working near the quayside and he was eating a butty as he was working. Anyway, he fell into the dock and somebody shouted 'Pug Baxter's in the dock'. A few ran to the quayside and there was Pug Baxter in the dock, and he was treading water and still eating his butty!"

"The nickname for the dock policeman at Preston was 'P. Grant'. If you heard anybody say 'P. Grant', you put your cigarette out. It was an offence to smoke on the dock. You had civil police and you also had dock police, employed by the Ribble Navigation. The ordinary police constable was allowed access to the dock at any time. They didn't bother us much really, they used to chat and talk to us."

The Seamen's Mission

"The Seamen's Mission was a wooden, single storey building. They had a community room and all that sort of thing. There was a tea bar, which my mum managed, she used to serve them with the tea and of course I used to have to go and help scrub the floors and tables. There was nothing alcoholic. There was just tea, biscuits and sandwiches."

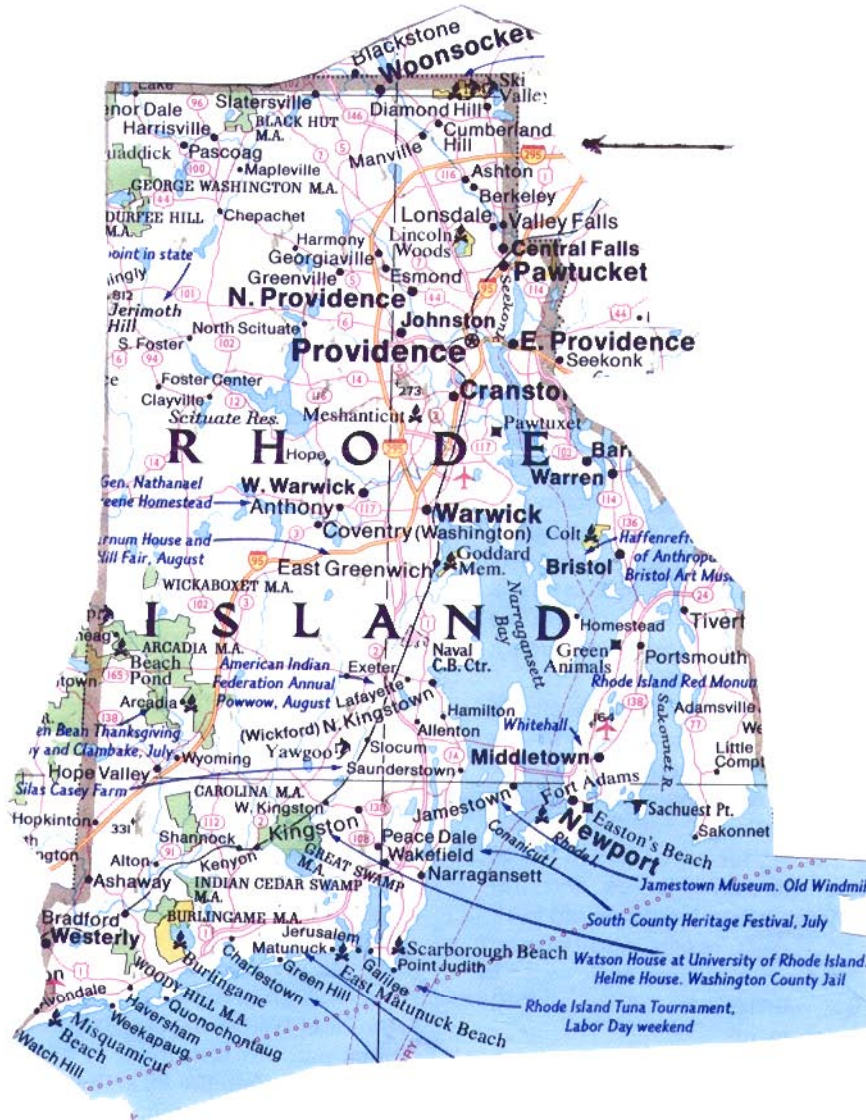

"The canteen in the old days was the Seamen's Mission, right near the black cabin. The seamen used one side of it. There was a billiard table and rest room. On the other side was a canteen which dockers used. But it was run by the Seamen's Mission."

"There were no showers. There was a cabin that was a dining hall. It was a wooden structure like a giant hen cabin. They called it the 'black cabin'. The only washing facility was a lean-to at the back with a row of cold water taps and enamel basins. So you just had a swill before your lunch. You can imagine what it was like if you'd been working on coal or china clay or pitch. Later on the Corporation was compelled to build a new toilet block, a locker room, showers and changing facilities."

Manville, Rhode Island

The Mullarkeys lived in Manville, Cumberland, Ashton, Lonsdale, Central Falls, Slaters Villa, Pascoar, Diamond Hill and Blackstone.

John & Mary Heaney Mullarkey arrived in 1884 with Margaret, Mary, Joseph, Edward, William. Francis and his wife arrived in 1886. Their eldest son John stayed in Preston and went into the British Royal Army.

MANVILLE

Once known as Sennetchoner by the American Indians and Sennetchonet Island by the early colonists, the area now known as the village of Manville began its existence as a wading place. Wading places were important locations along the Blackstone River where shallows and slower currents allowed people to cross by foot, horse, or wagon.

Among the first to settle here were Samuel and Plain Wilkinson, who arrived and established a homestead near Sayles Hill in the 1670s. The Wilkinsons' descendants ignored an English parliamentary decree and established a forge at Mussey Brook. The forge, called Unity Furnace, produced the first American-made cut nails and screws. The forge also assisted the Revolutionary effort by producing cannon and cannon balls.

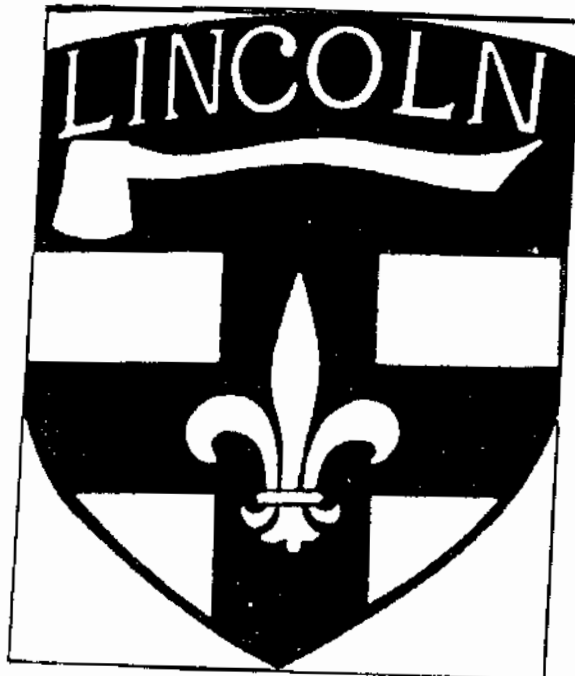

By 1811, most of the Wilkinsons had joined Samuel Slater in Pawtucket. A partnership consisting of Thomas Mann, Samuel Hill, William Aldrich, and others purchased the Wilkinsons' property along the Blackstone River. A wooden cotton mill was built, and the manufacturing operation was named Unity Manufacturing Company.

Another prominent member of the Mann family was Samuel Man (who preferred to use only one "n" in his last name). Samuel was a larger-than-life individual and the man after whom the village is named. Samuel Man and business partner, William Jenkins, acquired Unity Manufacturing in 1821 and renamed it Jenkins and Man. The two men continued to purchase land adjacent to the wooden mill until 1826, when they laid out a foundation for a giant textile mill.

Jenkins and Man built housing, constructed the first public school, a library, and mill stores in the village. The company also assisted in the establishment of the village churches, and provided other social and recreational amenities for their mill operatives.

The Great Depression and the unionization of workers in the 20th century placed a heavy financial burden on successive owners of the mill company and the textile industry as a whole. Production and profit at the mill slowly declined. In 1955, a devastating flood and ensuing fire turned the Manville mill into a mountain of smoldering rubble. The mill village was intact, but deprived of its largest mill and employer.

The man and the mill that gave Manville its name may no longer exist, but the community and several historic buildings have survived. Today, the village of Manville is primarily residential and has some light commercial and manufacturing activity. The village is predominantly populated with French Canadian descendants of the original mill operatives who came to work in the Blackstone Valley during the heyday of textile manufacturing.

Town fathers chose this coat of arms for the new Town of Lincoln. The ax was placed prominently below the town's name because of President Lincoln's recognized reputation as a great rail-splitter. The fleur-de-lis centered on a red cross is a reference to Lincolnshire, England. The remaining decorations, a red background and gold edges, were applied to satisfy heraldic custom. (Town of Lincoln.)

THE NORTH WOODS

The North Woods and the Outlands of Providence were names given to the area comprising present-day Lincoln by Rhode Island's founding fathers. In 1636, Roger Williams negotiated the acquisition of vast tracts of land from the Narragansett Indian sachems (kings) Cannonicus and Miantonomi. Though referred to as rocky, meadowless, and barren, the area was used by small bands of natives for hunting, fishing, and primitive agriculture.

For the next 30 years, only a few brave English souls ventured into this area, preferring instead to remain in the relative comfort and security of the town of Providence. By the 1660s, the presence of limestone deposits, fertile soil, and potential profit finally encouraged the first English settlers to spend more time in the North Woods.

After King Philip's failed Indian uprising in the 1670s, renewed Colonial interest in the outlands resulted in the creation of a great road. The c. 1683 Great Road and the North Woods continued to remain part of the town of Providence until 1730. By that time, public outcry over the inconvenience and difficulty of traveling to Providence to conduct town business resulted in the creation of the Town of Smithfield. The geographical area of present-day Lincoln was located in this town.

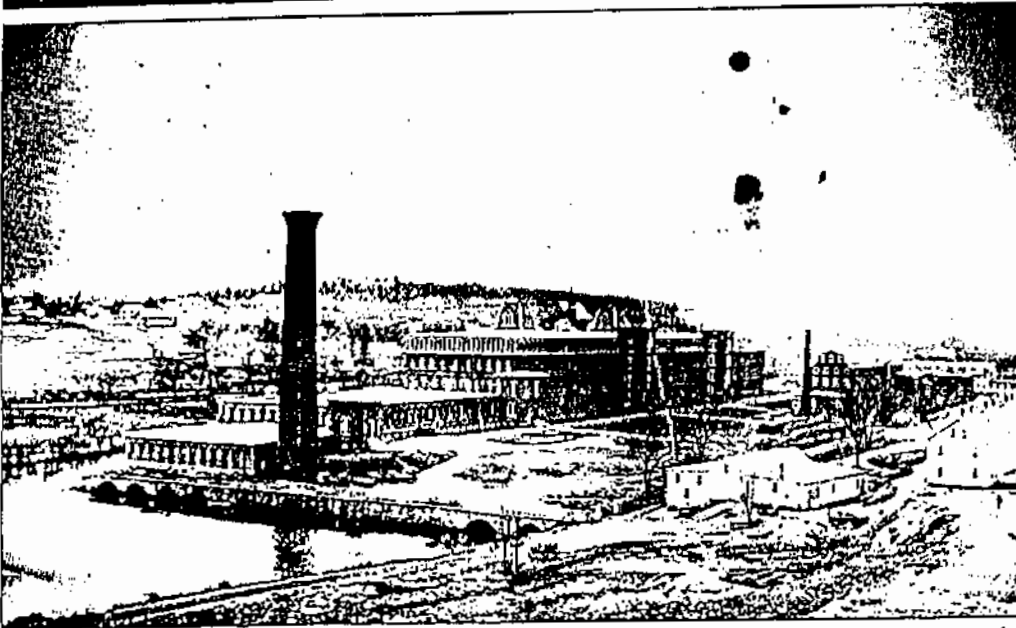

The 19th century brought the Industrial Revolution and with it political disagreement among the villages of Smithfield. The rural parts of town cared little for what was important to the mill villages in the eastern sections of Smithfield, and vice versa. They had few priorities in common. A town meeting in January 1871 resulted in plans to divide the town of Smithfield, and a number of new names were considered for the new town to the east. Some names were given more consideration than others; among those discussed were Lincoln, Lonsdale, Lime Rock, Smithfield, South Smithfield, Moshassuck, Quinsnickert, and Louisquisset. It was eventually decided that the new town would be called Lincoln to honor the memory of the popular and recently slain president.

The new Town of Lincoln was incorporated on March 8, 1871, by an act of the General Assembly of the State of Rhode Island. Lincoln retained a town council form of government, some cash, and part of Smithfield's old debt. Within its borders were nine village-districts: Manville, Albion, Lime Rock, Quinville, Lonsdale, Saylesville, Fairlawn, Central Falls, and Valley Falls. Central Falls and its portion of Valley Falls remained a village of Lincoln until 1895.

Despite the passage of so much time as members of a single, larger municipality, Lincoln's unique collection of village-districts have managed to extend their individual historical, social, and cultural identities into the 21st century.

With the aid of the Wilkinsons from the Unity Furnace in Manville, Samuel Slater re-created the industrial textile machines of England in 1790s Pawtucket. His textile weaving looms and processes were adopted by other industrialists and gave birth to this country's Industrial Revolution. The mills and mill villages of Lincoln owe their very existence to Slater.

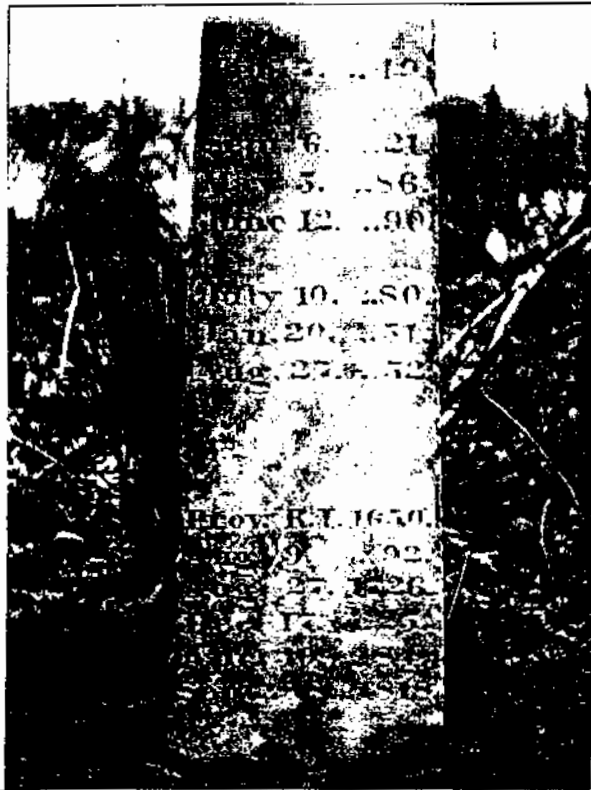

The gigantic Manville mill, millhouses, and village are depicted in this c. 1895 photograph. This large mill and others like it transformed the image of Lincoln from a farming community to a manufacturing town during the 19th century. Portions of this mill and its associated village were located on both sides of the Blackstone River. At that time, this view across the river from Cumberland was not obstructed by trees.

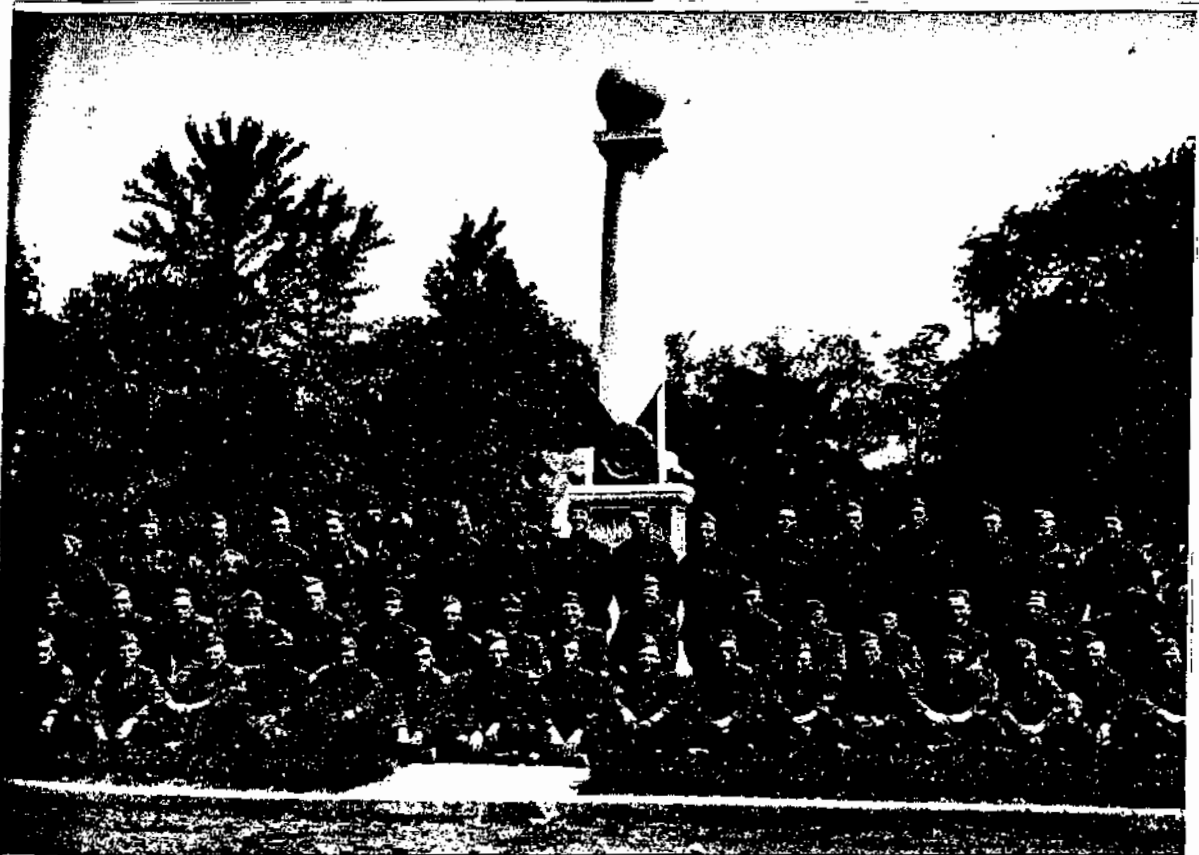

A "View of Manville R.I. along Blackstone River" is the caption that accompanied the scene on this illustrated postcard produced in 1909. Many of these cards were bought and sent by Manville residents to relatives in Canada. The people of Manville were truly proud of their adopted village. Though it was originally industry driven, the community was, and remains, an attractive place to reside.

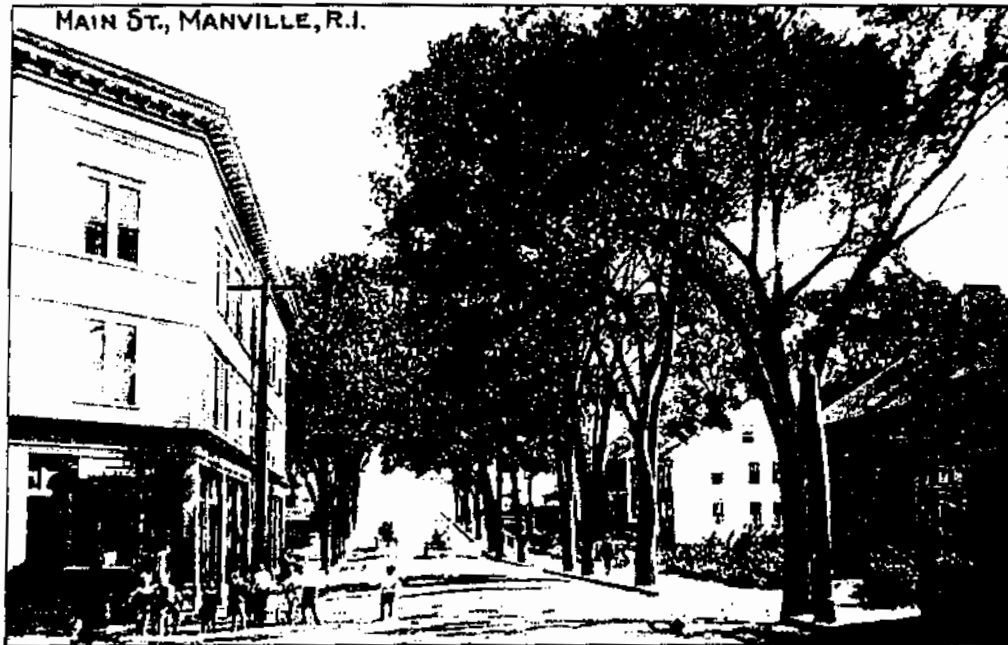

The brick-blocks section of Manville village attests to the fact that this was once a thriving mill town. Several long rows of these c. 1890 brick millhouses were built by the mill company to house the multitudes of operatives needed to run the mill. The mill no longer had the luxury of building single-home and duplex housing for hundreds of new workers.

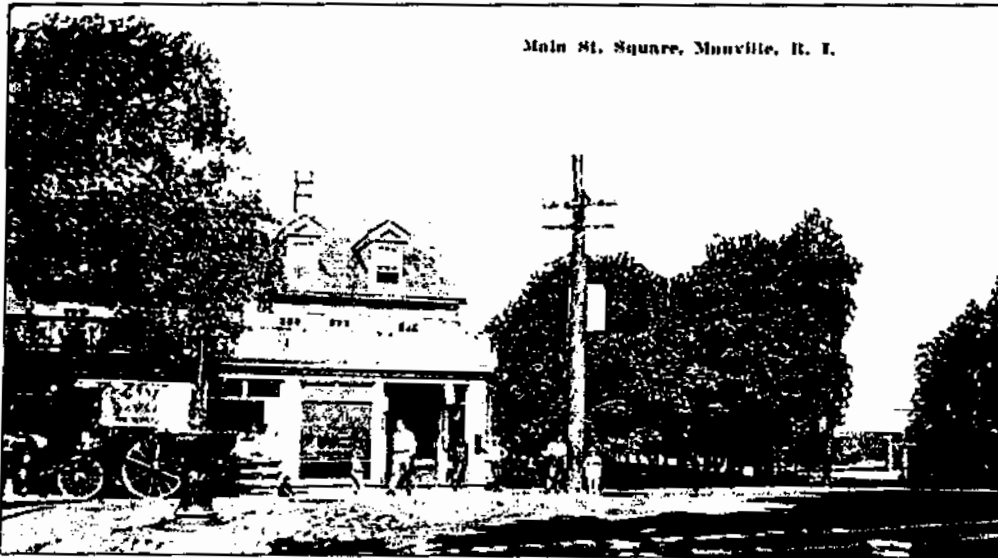

Samuel and Plain Wilkinson were the first settlers in the Manville area. The descendants of this pioneer couple founded Unity Furnace at Mussey Brook, near the Blackstone River. There, Israel Wilkinson and his sons operated a forge to produce the colony's first cut nails and screws. They also produced cannons for the Revolution. This limestone obelisk marker, located off of Central Street, documents the family's births, marriages, and deaths. The dates range from the 1600s to the 1800s.

Manville's surviving World War I veterans gathered on November 11, 1919, to dedicate this country's first monument in recognition of those who served in the war. The memorial was designated that day as being "the first of its kind in the United States" by U.S. Sen. Henry F. Lippitt. Though the dedication took place on Veterans Day 1919, the monument was actually completed in 1918. Two hundred and twenty-eight names are inscribed on this, the most extraordinary veterans' monument in the town of Lincoln.

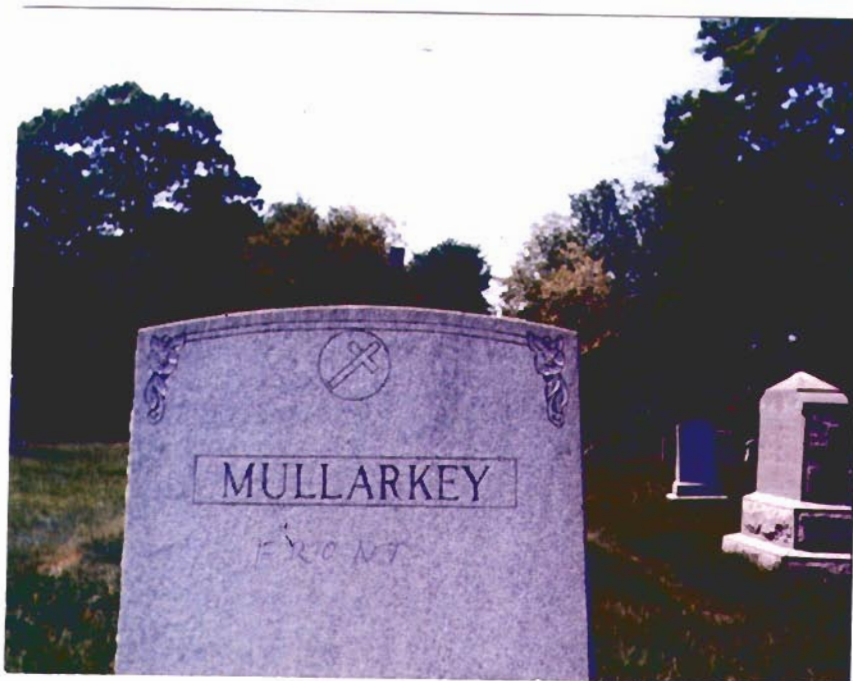

A wonderful early-20th-century view up Manville's Main Street is depicted in this image. Samuel Man was directly responsible for preserving this peaceful view into the next century. The railroad wanted rails in the area at the foreground of this photograph. Samuel discouraged the railroad from laying tracks across what he considered to be his Main Street by holding a rifle and threatening to shoot the first rail worker to stick a shovel in the ground. The railroad backed down and placed the rails near the river.

This c. 1900 photo-postcard depicts a former duplex millhouse at Main and Railroad Street. The corner used to be referred to as Main Street Square. The building was one of the village's first millhouses. Though greatly modified, it still stands at the corner of Main and Railroad Streets, and now is the home of the Harmony Cafe. In front of the wagon, to the left of the scene, is a famous Jenks Watering Fountain.

Isabella Foley (1889-1918) had a daughter who she named Isabella. In 1918, Isabella Foley died of the flu.

Welcome TO NEW BEDFORD

CITY OF NEW BEDFORD MASSACHUSETTS

New Bedford, Massachusetts

"... the dearest place to live in, in all New England."

—Herman Melville, Moby Dick

When Herman Melville shipped aboard the whaleship Acushnet in 1841, he was clearly impressed by New Bedford's opulent homes with their emerald lawns and gardens and the enormous wealth of this burgeoning seaport. But he was equally struck by New Bedford's cultural diversity. Indeed, Melville devotes almost a chapter describing how people of every background could be found on New Bedford streets, drawn here from all over the globe, lured by the promise of wealth and adventure.

Toleration was the hallmark of early New Bedford's Quaker heritage and these attitudes helped foster cultural diversity throughout the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, making New Bedford a city with extensive abolitionist ties and a stop on the Underground Railroad.

As whaling declined, New Bedford's emerging textile industry continued to draw thousands of immigrants from Canada and Europe. These new residents built bustling neighborhoods from the far North End to Clark's Cove in the South End. Their work ethic was the driving force behind some of the legendary names of the textile industry including Wamsutta Mills and Bershure-Hathaway.

The second half of the twentieth century has been less kind to the fortunes of this fine city, as it has to all cities in the Northeast that relied heavily on manufacturing as their economic mainstay. But New Bedford's people have always been a tenacious and hard-working lot.

As our city stands at the threshold of a new millennium, it is poised for significant growth. New Bedford's connection to the sea will continue to provide it with opportunities for growth in marine science and technology, in partnership with higher education and in maritime industry and commerce. Our rich history is now celebrated in the New Bedford Whaling National Historical Park. A host of projects are underway to improve our intermodal transportation systems to ensure a new era of prosperity.

During this sesquicentennial year, we celebrate our city's past and look forward to the future. New Bedford's prospects are indeed bright, because of its geography, its history, and most of all, its diverse and resilient people. In 1897, our semi-centennial year, Thomas B. Reed, Speaker of the National House, said of New Bedford's people: "The earth has got to be very shifty to get out of the grasp of a people equally at home on land and water." Reed's statement is no less true today.

The pages that follow are a testament to New Bedford's rich history and to its thriving cultural diversity. Paul Buchanan's insightful text aptly articulates that New Bedford's strength is and has always been its people. The rare and wonderful photographs included in this book, some never before published, are from the Special Collection Archives of the New Bedford Free Public Library. May the reader celebrate with us New Bedford's past and hail us as we chart our course for the twenty-first century.

Rosemary S. Tierney
Mayor

In honor of the whaleman whose skill, hardihood and daring brought fame and fortune to New Bedford and made its name known in every seaport of the globe.

New Bedford Whaling Museum

Climb aboard the world's largest ship model, the fully-rigged whaling bark, Lagoda.

The New Bedford Whaling Museum is the largest museum devoted to the history of American whaling. It also is the area's most complete historical museum. There are galleries devoted to ship models, whaling tools and gear, scrimshaw, a fully-equipped whaleboat and a 100-foot mural of sperm whales. Exhibits of photography, glass, textiles and folk art reflect bygone eras. Paintings by Ashley, Bierstadt, Bradford, Gifford and other well-known artists offer a vivid reminder of the locale's past. The library provides unrivaled resources for research on whaling and New Bedford.

The Museum, on Johnny Cake Hill, is in the heart of New Bedford's magnificently restored historic district. Across the street is the Seamen's Bethel, which Melville describes in Moby-Dick. Two blocks away is the Visitor's Center where you can find directions to the Rotch-Jones-Duff House and Garden Museum, the Children's Museum and other attractions including the East Coast's largest fishing fleet, retail outlets, restaurants and beaches.

The city of New Bedford is a culturally diverse community, rich in history. From our beautiful beaches to our working waterfront, our assets are plentiful. New Bedford is home to the Whaling Museum, the Zeiterion Theater, a zoo with a promising new future, and several Summer celebrations that attract visitors from around the globe. Our greatest asset is our citizenry as the tenacious spirit of New Bedford and its people remains constant.

Intermodal transportation is a key to New Bedford's continuing development. We have access to waterways, rail and the skies with an aggressive five year plan to expand our fine airport. This, coupled with the reactivation of a Foreign Trade Zone, will provide the necessary tools to allow our industries to compete in a global market.

New Bedford's name is worn proudly throughout the world as Titleist golf balls and Polaroid film are manufactured in our city and distributed worldwide. We are home to other leading industries such as Footjoy, American Flexible Conduit, the Cliftex Corporation, Teledyne Rodney Metals, the PCI Group, and Sea Watch International.

Recognized for an outstanding public school system, New Bedford has also formed partnerships with the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth, opening a neighborhood college and establishing new programs in aquaculture. Quality health care graces New Bedford with St. Luke's Hospital and its community-oriented services in oncology, home hospice and paramedics.

Cultural exchanges include "sister-city" relationships with cities in Japan and Cape Verde. Each of these visits brings the promise of increased economic ties. New Bedford's future is bright. New Bedford's future holds promise.

Very truly yours,

Rosemary S. Tierney

We have been chronicling the Mullarkey's journey from Ireland and England – many of whom landed in New Bedford, Massachusetts. There they found a large Irish immigrant community. But you cannot talk about New Bedford without also looking at the Portuguese – many of whom had emigrated from the Azore Islands. The Azores is a group of nine islands located in the Atlantic Ocean roughly halfway between Europe and the United States. Many Portuguese landed at Boston Harbor and settled in the neighboring areas. There they found work with other immigrant groups farming, fishing, and working in the mills. They found themselves living, working, and worshipping among the other European immigrants who had preceded them. One does not need to look too deeply into the Mullarkey family tree to see Portuguese names rapidly becoming a part of this family's heritage.

STORY OF LAURETTA COURNOYER BLAIS 1912-1983

Born in Rhode Island. Daughter of Lionel and Mary (Clifton) Cournoyer.

Left home at the age of 16 and went to work with the "Grey Nuns" at Holy Ghost Hospital in Cambridge, Massachusetts. This was a hospital for patients with incurable diseases. Laretta then did nursing and St. Theresa and Notre Dame Hospitals in Central Fall, Rhode Island. While working there she also did private duty nursing for several families. During this time, she met Gerard Blais, fell in love and was married shortly after.

Laretta gave up nursing to raise her family and returned to work years later as a cloth inspector. She retired at the age of 62 and died at the age of 70. She was a loving, giving person and touched many hearts.

Laretta and Gerard had five children: Suzanne (Lachapelle), Norman Blais, Lucille (Parent), Irene (Mowry), and Gloria (Tyler). All reside in the Rhode Island area.

Gerard Blais lives in Manville Manor in Manville, Rhode Island.

MARY (QUINLAN) CALLAHAN
1934 - 2001

Mary was born on 3/29/34.

She attended Holy Trinity Elementary School and graduated from St. Mary's High School in 1951. After high school she entered the "Home of the Good Shepard" in Peekskill, N.Y. to become a nun. In 1953 she left the convent for health reasons.

I met Mary in April of 1954 and on July 5, 1955 we were married in Holy Trinity Church, Central Falls, R.I. In November of 1956, Mary and I moved to Connecticut. On January 1958 our son Michael was born. On February 28, 1964 our daughter Kelly was born.

Mary was very active in church and the Democratic Party.

We lived in Connecticut for 41 years. In 1998 we moved to New Hampshire to live with my son, Michael. Mary had been ill for about 15 years prior to going to "Riverside Rest Home" in Dover N.H. Mary remained at "Riverside" for 14 months and passed away there on November 20, 2001.

During our Connecticut years Mary drove a school bus for eighteen years.

I hope that this info may fill a small hole in your search. Please return the pictures.

Jessie Ellen Mullarkey, 1892 – 1980

Jessie was born in 1892 in Providence, Rhode Island – the second child of Joseph and Mary (Dowie) Mullarkey. After sometime the family moved to New Bedford, Massachusetts, where she was educated and then went to work in the New Bedford mills.

Very little is known about her early life. I do know she met Thomas Coffey, a soldier in the United States Army, who was stationed at Fort Rodman in New Bedford during the First World War. They courted, fell in love and were married.

After returning from a tour of duty overseas, Tom and Jessie moved to New York City, which is where Tom was born. He worked for the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company as a motorman. They had five children, two girl and three boys – Eileen, James (Buddy), Thomas (Tom), Dolores and Edward (Eddie).

After several years in New York City, the family moved to Brooklyn, New York, where the children were raised and educated.

Jessie and Tom were active in their parish church and community. They belonged to Resurrection Catholic Church in Brooklyn.

Tom retired from the BMT in 1949 and he and Jessie enjoyed their 25 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren.

Buddy and Eddie live in the same area of Brooklyn and still attend Resurrection Church. Tom lives in Philadelphia.

Of the children and grandchildren of Buddy, Tom and Eddie, some live and go to the same schools and church in Brooklyn. Others have moved to Long Island, Philadelphia, Maryland and California.

Jessie died in 1980. Tom died in 1952.

Eileen Theresa Coffey

I am Eileen, the first-born child of Jessie (Mullarkey) Coffey and Thomas F. Coffey. I was born in Fairhaven, Massachusetts. Shortly afterwards, the family moved to New York City, the birthplace of my father. After several years in New York City, the family (then Tom, Jessie and their children – Eileen, James and Thomas) moved to Brooklyn, New York, where Dolores and Edward were born.

I graduated from Resurrection Catholic School and attended St. Brendan's High School, after which I worked at the 1939 World's Fair in Flushing Meadows, New York. When the Fair ended I worked for E. R. Squibb's and Sons on Fifth Avenue in New York as Mail Department Supervisor.

I didn't go far to meet my future husband, as he lived across the street from me. He is Henry Gordon Schultze, although he has always been called Gordon. Gordon attended Brooklyn College and then worked for Republic Aviation on Long Island. Gordon and I were married in February 1941 and our first child, Barbara, was born in April 1942. In 1943 Gordon was drafted into the Navy and was sent to a technical school in Oklahoma to study aviation metal smith. After his discharge from the Navy, he returned to his job at Republic Aviation.

Patricia was born in Brooklyn in 1947, after which we moved to Long Island. Eleanor was born in 1950, Thomas in 1953, Jean in 1955, Susan in 1956, and Steve in 1960. In 1967 Gordon accepted a transfer to Hagerstown, Maryland, to work for Fairchild Industries, and the family settled in Frederick, Maryland.

We belong to Holy Family Catholic Community. I am an Extraordinary Minister, and Gordon and I, and many of the children and grandchildren, are involved in many ministries in the church.

In October 1982 Gordon retired and we did some traveling. We are fortunate to have all of our children, their spouses, 13 grandchildren and three great grandchildren living close by.

Dolores Coffey, 1931 – 1970

Dolores was born the fourth child of Jessie (Mullarkey) Coffey and Thomas F. Coffey in 1931 in Brooklyn, New York. She graduated from Resurrection Elementary School and then from St. Edmond's High School.

At about age eleven, Dolores was diagnosed with diabetes. Until she was sixteen, she was in and out of hospitals to be regulated. After graduation and holding some small jobs, she went to work for an insurance company and stayed there for many years.

However, diabetes would attack with a vengeance and she started to lose her sight. At Massachusetts General Hospital they found they could do nothing for her, since there had been too much hemorrhaging. Dolores died in 1970.

I am the youngest of five children born to Jessie Mullarkey and Thomas Frances Coffey. I was born on March 24, 1933 in Brooklyn, New York. We lived for many years in Gerritsen Beach which is a small neighborhood community. For my education, I attended Resurrection Elementary School and graduated in 1949. I went onto the High School of Printing. I graduated in 1952 and went to work in the printing industry. That was until Uncle Sam sent me a letter in 1953. I joined the Army for 2 years, in which time I traveled to Germany & France. After finishing my service, I went back into the printing industry, I worked for many years at the New York Police Printing Department. I retired in 1995. My wife retired also in 1995.

In 1958, I met my wife, Patricia Elizabeth Mongan in Point Look-Out, Long Island. We were engaged and married on April 11, 1959. We had our wedding in St. Patrick Cathedral, in one of the back small chapels. We started our new life together in a small apartment in Sheepshead Bay section of Brooklyn. We had our first child, Teresa on 1/20/1963 and then started to look for a home. With our new home, came our 2nd child Kathleen, born on 7/14/1964. We then had 4 more children, Edward (9/14/1965), Kenneth (5/7/1968), Brian (10/24/1970) and but not least Richard (11/14/1972). Tragically we lost our Kenneth at the age of 32. He died of a blood clot that traveled from his leg to his heart. But as in life, Kenneth has able to help other people by being an organ donor.

My daughter, Kathleen got married to Thomas Conaghan on 11/9/1991. My son, Brian Coffey got married to Ellie on October 24, 2002. My other son, Richard Coffey got married to Elvira on May 15, 2003. We have 3 grandchildren, Fiona Katharine Conaghan, Kieran Frances Conaghan and Riley Alexa Coffey.

Pat and I have been married now for 46 years.

Remember, O most gracious
Virgin Mary, that never was it

EDWARD MULLARKEY SR. 1867 - 1947

Edward Mullarkey Sr. was the 6th child of John and Mary (Heaney) Mullarkey, born in Preston, England, in 1867. The family moved to Manville, Rhode Island May 1, 1884.

Edward Sr. married Sarah Sweeney in R.I. about 1887. They had five children – Sarah, Edward Jr. (my father), James, Joseph and John.

His brother Joseph had moved to New Bedford where he found work in the mills and Edward and his family soon followed. His wife Sarah passed away in 1913 and left Edward to raise the children ages 15 to 25 years old.

He was a mulespinner, a trade in the mills. There were only a few mulespinners in each mill (see notes in the intro about mulespinners). He lived in the south end of New Bedford and later in life lived with his daughter Sarah.

My recollection of him was when he came to dinner at our house every Saturday night. We always had Boston baked beans made in the pot with hot dogs setting in them. My job was to take the bean pot to the bakery a block away. After the ovens were turned off, the pot was set in there and cooked all day. They tied a jar on with your name on it. I would go down and get them at 5 p.m., ready to eat. The cost was 5 cents. It meant that in the summer you didn't have to have an oven on all day.

SARAH MULLARKEY QUAIL

Sarah Mullarkey was born to Edward and Sarah Sweeney Mullarkey in Rhode Island in 1888. She was the oldest of five children. Her brothers were Edward, James, Joseph and John. The family moved to New Bedford, Massachusetts around 1905. Eventually Sarah married Hugh Quail and they had seven children; Hugh, Joseph, Margaret, Edward, John, Rita and Kathleen. Her husband, Hugh, died in 1932 at a Hibernia Club Dance when Kathleen, their youngest, was just seven years old. As I understand, Sarah's brothers tried to be of help even though, at that time, surviving was hard for everyone. Sarah passed away when she was eighty plus years, having outlived all but two of her children. She was a very outgoing woman. I remember going by her house when I was a young boy and it seemed that there was always something on the stove. The house was small, but somehow she and her children found room to make it all work.

1921 - 1961

Married to Antonio J. Estrella for over 20 years. Mother of two girls, Rita and Debbie – sister to six siblings, Hugh, John, Joe, Edward, Kathleen, and Margaret.

What I remember about her was her laugh and her love of life and having fun. My Dad and Mom had a wonderful bunch of childhood friends that they kept through their adulthood. They got together often and had wonderful times. She loved to dance and play jokes on people.

She was always willing to help out her sisters, and was at times peacemaker in the family.

She graduated from New Bedford High School. She was a member of St. James Church in New Bedford and was very active in the Women's Guild.

My best memory of her was when I got those special hugs from her that brought a sense of comfort and peace.

In her early twenties she got rheumatic fever and was left with an enlarged heart. She died at the age of 40.

EDWARD MULLARKEY JR. 1890 - 1968

Edward Mullarkey Jr. was the 2nd of five children born to Edward Mullarkey Sr. and Sarah Sweeney. He had an older sister Sarah and three brothers - James, Joseph and John.

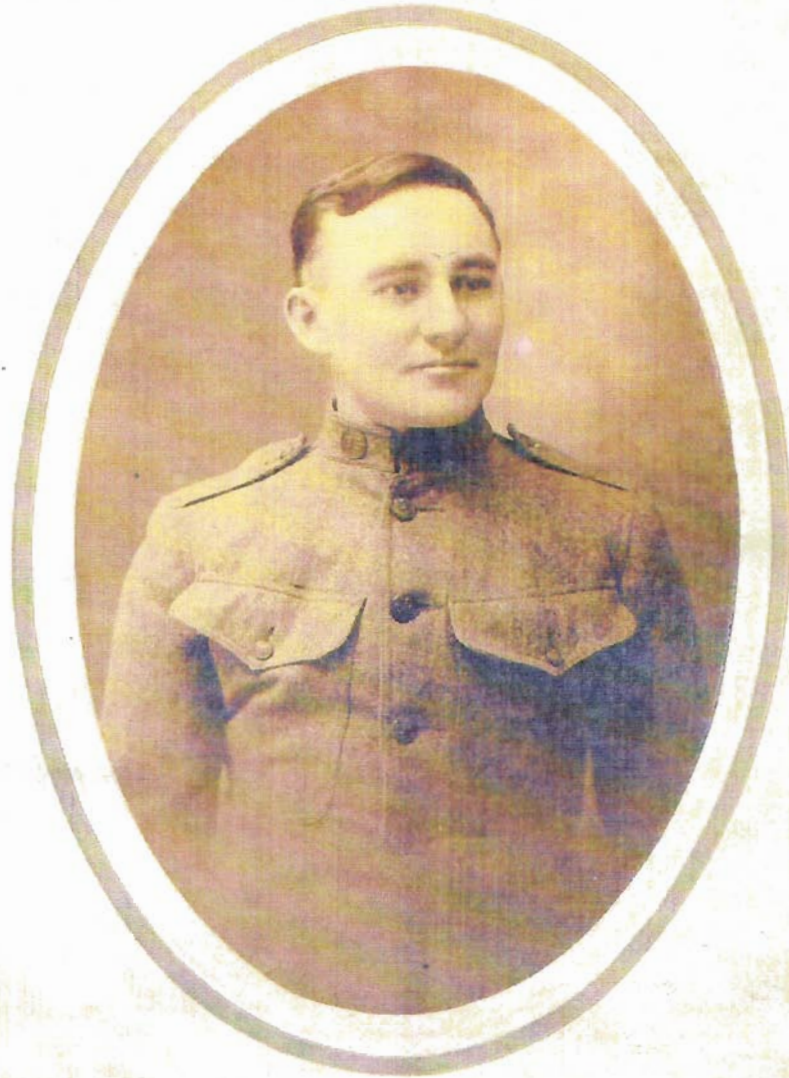

He was born in Pawtucket R.I. He left school in about the 5th grade and went into the mills as most children did in those days.

In 1904 they moved to New Bedford, Massachusetts, also to be in the mills. As his father before him, he became a mulespinner (see article in the introduction part of the book). While in the mills, he also was a baseball player. It seems that all the mills had teams.

His mother died in 1913 and his father was left to raise the children.

In 1915 he married Rose Garvey and at that time went into the army in WW1. They had three children, Catherine, John and Edward. After he came out of the service he went back into the mills. When the mills closed in 1929, he was out of work for over a year. He finally got a job in the only all night gas station in the center of the city. In about 1940 or 1941 that job ran out.

He was in the veteran's hospital for a while, then in 1943 he went to work for the Star store and spent the rest of his working days there.

EDWARD MULLARKEY III
1939 – 1967

Edward was the third child of Edward and Rose (Garvey) Mullarkey. He had an older sister, Catherine (Mullarkey) Silva, born in 1921 who passed away in 2004, and a brother, John Edward Mullarkey, born in 1927. John lives in California.

Edward was born in New Bedford, Massachusetts. After graduating from high school, he spent some years in the U.S. Army Reserves. He was pursuing a career as an artist when he met Lucille Burnham, also an artist. They were married and had one daughter, Janet Mullarkey. He and Lucille made a living grinding out the advertisements you see in the Yellow Pages Phone Books, so they could continue doing their own artwork on the side. In 1965 he got a job with the U.S. Government in Washington, D.C. He did artwork for the Armed Forces Newspaper. In 1966, when they gave him a physical, they found a mass in his chest, which they then diagnosed as lung cancer. After long sessions of chemotherapy, he passed away in 1967 at only 29 years of age.

Lucille and Janet moved back to the New Bedford-Fairhaven area. She was eventually able to open her own art gallery in Brewster, Mass. on Cape Cod. She was successful for many years and passed away in 1989. Janet has one daughter, Ana.

This picture appeared in the Armed Forces Newspaper. My brother Edward Mullarkey took a job in Washington, D. C. as an artist in 1966. He cleverly put his name into his picture as a datebook entry. Sadly, he passed away of cancer in 1967.

LUCILLE (MULLARKEY) WILSON 1940 - 1989

Lucille Burnham was born in Cape Ann, Massachusetts on February 3, 1940 and educated in Gloucester.

Private art lessons and further study at the Rhode Island School of Design and the Americano University led her to a life long love of painting the sea and many estuaries found on the eastern shore. She met Edward Mullarkey, III, also an artist. They were married and had one daughter, Janet Mullarkey. Lucille and Eddie made a living grinding out the advertisements you see in the Yellow Pages Phone Books so they could continue doing their own artwork on the side. After Eddie's death in 1967 she moved back from Washington, DC to Massachusetts. Lucille owned and operated two galleries on Cape Cod's north side for ten years and remarried during that time.

Walking the shores of both ocean and bay has provided the inspiration for the hundreds of seascapes she has produced. The Cape afforded many other subjects that she enjoyed painting including the cranberry bogs, fishing shanties, etc.

Her work is represented in many private collections here and abroad.

Surviving her are her daughter, Janet and her granddaughter, Ana.

JAMES FRANCIS MULLARKEY 1895 - 1988

James was born in Central Falls, R.I.

He moved to New Bedford, MA to work in a knitting mill prior to Child Labor laws.

While riding the evening trolley to work at Lincoln Amusement Park, he met Marie Reine (Grace) Surprenant, a co-worker. They married on June 15, 1920 and were blessed with four children: Agnes, Grace (Millie), Theresa & James.

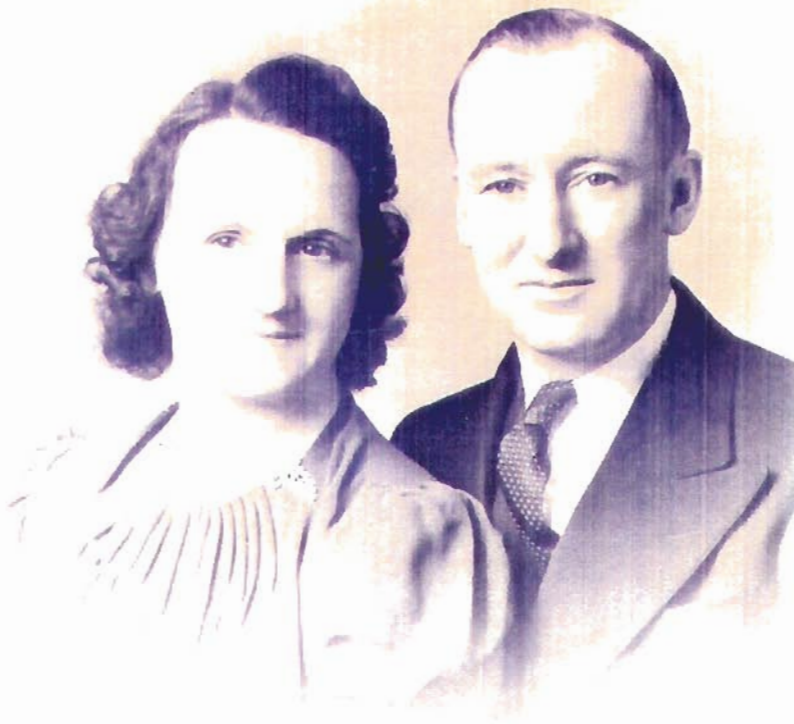

During the Depression they moved to Hartford, CT. For many years he worked 12 hours a day, 6 – 7 days per week, as nighttime manager of the Mark Twain Diner. He eventually left and managed three other restaurants, and then worked until almost age 80 as a guide at the OLD STATE HOUSE museum.

He had a passion for the Boston Red Sox, Dutch Master cigars, and loved to play with his grandchildren.

In 1945 James and Grace purchased a home in West Hartford, where they hosted many family gatherings and provided accommodations for numerous relatives, friends and people in need. A man of limited means, he was very generous and came to the assistance of many who had fallen on hard times.

He is remembered as a gentle man, hard worker, good boss, wonderful father and a fun grandfather, generous and highly respected.

Grace Surprenant (4/7/1897 – 10/8/1991) was born in Magog, Quebec, Canada

JAMES MULLARKEY JR.
1934 -

James Daniel Mullarkey, 5/8/34, married Patricia Black , born 6/9/37, on 4/20/63. This resulted in the birth of the five children:

Ann Elise – 3/7/64

Daniel – 1/3/664

Maureen Elizabeth – 10/11/67

Michaela Caitlin – 8/31/70

Brendan 4/8/73

To support this household I have been employed for a number of years as salesman for Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. I have no particular outside interests but do like to do woodworking projects, have been doing a lot of reading of the Gettysburg battle since Maureen first looked at that college. I spent a lot of time as a spectator watching the children participating in various sports.

Pat is the grand matriarch ... the glue so to speak, to keep the household in equilibrium! After 20 years as a housewife, Pat is employed as a computer programmer at Travelers Insurance Co. She seems to have melded in well with the youth who are half her age, and while the job is very demanding, does seem to enjoy being in the mainstream again.

John, I hope this gives you an overview of the Hartford Mullarkeys. We don't get out west very often but in 1982 Pat and I visited San Francisco and drove down the coast to visit sister Theresa in San Marino. Last year Travelers sent Pat to a seminar in San Jose, and in February we were in Laguna Niguel for five days prior to a vacation in Hawaii. You have lovely country in your area and hopefully we will get to S.F. again sometime. It is our hope to get to Ireland for our 25th anniversary in 1988. Your history of the family could make the trip, if we ever get that far, even more interesting. Incidentally, we have a local acquaintance, an Irish immigrant, whose mother is a Mullarkey from Sligo. His name is Jimmy Staunton.

John, I look forward to your visit. When you get east we will all get together. It's difficult to get the youngsters together but at least the elders will be able to exchange greetings. Good luck on your project. Hopefully this info will be of some help.

RITA (MULLARKEY) BRADSHAW

I was born to John Joseph and Edith (Metcalf) Mullarkey on June 21, 1921 in New Bedford Massachusetts. I was their only child. We lived on Valentine Street for my first eleven years and then we moved to our home on Norman Street. I attended kindergarten at the John Hannigan School, then 1st grade thru 6th at the William H. Taylor. I went to Roosevelt Junior High and then on to New Bedford High School. After high school I went to Wilfred Academy of hairdressing in Boston, Massachusetts. After graduation worked I for a year and a half ; then married William Edgar Bradshaw on November 5, 1941. We had three children: Ronald born April 8, 1943, Jane born April 24, 1947 and Robert born May 23, 1951.

My husband built the Flax Pond Motel in Dennis, Massachusetts on Cape Cod. We moved there in 1954 to run the business, sold it in 1959 and moved to Florida. We bought a home and lived there until we sold it in 1972.

Ronald married a Florida girl (Shirley Knowles) in 1962 and they gave us our first granddaughter. She is 28 years old and will be married May 31, 1992. Jane married Nicholas Biancardo in 1977 and they gave us two more, beautiful granddaughters.

Robert has never been married. He went to work at Doral Beach Hotel in 1964 and retired in 1972.

My husband and I bought a mini home travel trailer and took a wonderful trip up to Alaska and through Canada and a number of the states. We left in May and returned in late October with pleasant memories to think about. From then on we moved from campground to campground making many new friends and just enjoying life.

My husband passed away on March 13, 1984 and since that time I have been living with my daughter and her daughters. Hopefully this will be my last home but as you said, "God willing".

TERESA BEATRICE MULLARKEY

1904 – 1992

Teresa Beatrice Mullarkey was born to William Mullarkey and Mary Jane Shea on January 11, 1904; she always celebrated her birthday on the 12th. The fourth child and second daughter following William, Jr., Joseph and Marie, she was always known as Beatrice. She attended public school through half of her sophomore year until she left at age 14 to begin work in a mill. Her first job was as a “hander in” who gave thread to a “goer-in” (her sister Marie’s job) who then handed the thread to a skilled worker who repaired the thread on the loom.

She worked as a beautician doing Marcel waves, the hairstyle of the 20s until the state of Rhode Island started to require licensing. She attended Bryant and Stratton, a R.I. business school and became a bookkeeper. While working as a bookkeeper at Hope Rubber Company in Providence, she met George Ryan Euart and married him on October 28, 1941 at St. Raymond Church, Providence R.I.

Although George Euart was drafted in 1942, he was allowed to stay in Providence until their daughter Rose Anne was born on January 3, 1943. During the war, Beatrice rented rooms to naval dependents to help make ends meet. She took a part-time job at Gladdings in downtown Providence during the summers after her husband returned from the war. In 1950 the family moved to the second floor apartment in her mother’s house, and they remained there until George Euart was transferred to the Boston area.

In Needham Massachusetts her gardening skills became apparent as she landscaped her yard using plants from the Mullarkey yard in Providence. These plants were divided and now live in her daughter’s and granddaughters’ yards. She served as treasurer of the Catholic Women’s Club at St. Joseph parish in Needham, and she and her husband were staunch supporters of the parish.

Beatrice Teresa Mullarkey Euart died on July 7, 1992 and is buried in St. Ann’s Cemetery, Cranston R.I. alongside her husband and his parents.

THE MAN WITH THE NEW BACK BAR

He deserves a hero's medal
For the lives that he has saved;
And upon the roll of honor
His name should be engraved.
He deserves a lot of patience
For the way he stands the strain
As the bunk he has to swallow
Would drive a man insane.

He pays the highest license
And he pays the highest rent.
He must settle with the agents
Though he don't take in a cent
And when it comes to paying bills,
He's Johnny on the spot;
He pays for what he sells you
Whether you pay him or not.

And when you walk into his place
He will greet you with a smile,
Be you workman dressed in overalls
Or banker dressed in style.
Be you Irish, English, Dutch or French
It doesn't matter what,
He will treat you like a gentleman
Unless you prove you're not.

He must listen to their arguments
That happen in his place,
And show no partiality
To any creed or race,
The bunch outside can knock the King,
The Kaiser or the Czar;
But he has to be a neutral,
Does the man with the new back bar.

It matters not the aches and pains
And hardships he endures.
He doesn't tell you his troubles,
Though you always tell him yours.
And if the weather's hot or cold
Or turns from rain to snow.
It's up to you to tell him,
He's not supposed to know.

Should he sit down to read the news
Some fool, with half a jag
Pulls up a chair beside him
And begins to chew the rag.
They say that Job had patience,
A more patient man by far
Than Job could ever hope to be
Is the man with the new back bar.

Bean Hill Bar

Save Your Pennies for Our Annual Outing

Yet the preacher in the pulpit
And the lecturer in the hall
Will tell you that the churches
Are against him, one and all.
But should the church decide to hold
A fair or a bazaar
They start in selling tickets
To the man with the new back bar.

But the time must come when he,
Must shuffle off this mortal soil;
Hang up his coat and apron
No more on this earth to toll.
When St. Peter sees him coming
He will leave the gates ajar
For he knows he's had his hell on earth
Has the man with the new back bar.
